For decades she has also distinguished herself as a legal scholar. Cao, currently the Betty Hutton Williams Professor of International Economic Law at Chapman University School of Law, has lectured widely on law and international development. She earned her J.D. from Yale Law School after graduating from Mount Holyoke College with a B.A. in politics.

Nancy K. Welker '63

Doctor of Science

Physicist Nancy Welker's long career at the National Security Agency (NSA) helped lay the foundation for faster, more powerful computers. A nationally recognized expert, Welker led groundbreaking research in superconducting materials and integrated circuit manufacturing at the NSA, where she worked from 1963 to 2018. Welker's many accomplishments include helping to create the Microelectronics Research Laboratory, which supported production of integrated circuits for government use that were not commercially obtainable. She went on to manage the laboratory and was the first woman to be named chief of the NSA's research and development group.

In 2021, Welker was inducted into the Maryland Women's Hall of Fame, another entry on a list of accolades that include the Federal Women's Program Lifetime Achievement Award in engineering, the Women in Science and Engineering Lifetime Achievement Award and the Meritorious Presidential Rank Award. Welker earned master's and Ph.D. degrees in physics at American University after graduating from Mount Holyoke College with a bachelor's degree in physics.

ALMA MATER

Music: Gladys Pratt, class of 1914

Text: Gertrude Brady Murphy, class of 1914

O, Mount Holyoke, we pay thee devotion,
In the fervor of youth that is strong,
The courage of right is thy garland,
Our lives, Alma Mater, thy song.
So from east and from west now we gather,
And united in firm love to thee,
All years are as one, and their loyal pledge,
Mount Holyoke forever shall be,
Mount Holyoke forever shall be.

Through the heart of a new day's endeavor,
Breathes the life of the old days that live,
For what thou hast given we honor,
But we love thee for what we can give.
So when soft in a whisper thou callest,
For the treasures unlocked by thy key,
Our achievements, our hopes and our glorious faith
Shall answer, Mount Holyoke, to thee,
Shall answer, Mount Holyoke, to thee.

ACADEMIC APPAREL

The history of academic apparel has its origins in medieval British universities, particularly the University of Oxford, where scholars wore hoods and gowns as their customary daily attire. Because of the close affiliation between the university and the church at that time, academic gowns resembled cassocks and elaborately worked clerical vestments. It is from these medieval garments that American academic dress derives.

Today, American academic attire reflects the level of an individual's degree and the institution granting that degree. Black is the standard color for gowns, and the three levels of degrees are distinguished mainly by sleeve style. The length of the hood and its velvet border indicate the level of degree attained, the color of its lining identifies the institution conferring the degree and the color of the velvet trim indicates the field of learning. Some institutions have adopted solid-color gowns that incorporate their college or university colors, such as Harvard's crimson or Princeton's orange. The president of Mount Holyoke College wears a custom-made gown in the College's colors.

Many countries wear similar gowns. Chinese students might wear a "qipao" or "xue shi fu," forms of formal attire worn to important events. Vietnamese women graduating from college are likely to wear a white "ao die," described as a silken robe over trousers. Japanese women might wear a "hakama," formal attire that is associated with learnedness. Thai graduates could wear the traditional "suea khruai" ceremonial attire. In Ghana, graduates wear stoles made of kente cloth, a form of striped weaving originating from the Akan people of South Ghana, over their gowns.
